

NIGHT RIDERS BURN THREE I. C. DEPOTS

Because Road Had Given Permission to Soldiers to Camp on Their Grounds.

Depots at Gracey, Cerulean Springs and Otter Pond are Fired.

U. S. MAIL POUCH BURNED.
MEN WERE MASKED AND ARMED

Hopkinsville, Ky., July 22.— Night riders burned the stations of the Illinois Central Railroad early this morning at Gracey, in Christian county; Cerulean, in Trigg county; and Cobb, in Caldwell county. Each depot was set on fire shortly after 1 o'clock.

Yesterday the Illinois Central gave permission to Madisonville soldiers on duty in the night rider orion to camp on its property at Cobb, near Otter Pond, and this action aroused much indignation.

Each raid was composed of different squads of night riders.

Governor Notified.
Frankfort, Ky., July 22.—Gov.

error Willson was notified this morning that three depots on the Illinois Central Railroad had been burned last night, but no request was made for troops at any point. The Governor was simply given the facts in a telephone message. He conferred with General Johnston, who sent a telegram to Major Bassett, in command of the soldiers on duty in Western Kentucky, notifying him of the fires and wishing to take such steps as may be necessary.

It is believed that the burning of the depots on the Illinois Central is an attempt to get rid of the troops in Trigg county, by intimidating the railroad.
Several weeks ago when troops went to Trigg county they camped on the property belonging to the Illinois Central at Cobb.
The coming of the soldiers was resented bitterly and the Illinois Central came in for an attack because of allowing the soldiers to use its property as a camping ground.

It is thought here that the night riders are trying to force the railroad to remove the soldiers from its property.

Ruin Threatens Cathedral.
Word from Italy states that the ancient cathedral of Spoleto threatens to become a ruin owing to a gradual sinking of the slope on which it is built. A special commission has examined the structural conditions of the building, and has drawn up a report to the ministry of public instruction containing the technical suggestions necessary for its preservation.

Don't use harsh physics. The reaction weakens the bowels, leads to chronic constipation.
Get Doan's Regulets. They operate easily, tone the stomach, cure constipation.

Gladstone's Thrift.
Gladstone's liberality was very great, and was curiously accompanied by his love of small economies.
His determination to have the proper discount taken off the price of his second-hand books, his horror of a wasted half sheet of note paper, which almost equaled his detestation of a wasted minute.—Recollections of Sir Algernon West.

POOR JOHN POUCHER

Certain Signs That Made Him
Poor Ill.

When Mr. Poucher reached home that night he hung up his hat and coat on the hall rack, sighed, took a shrewd look at the parlor carpet and, dragging himself into the sitting-room, sank into his easy chair with a shock that shook the house.

"What's the matter, John?" cried Mrs. Poucher, running in. "You seem sick, are you?"

He turned to her a patient look of suffering and tried to smile.
"Tired!" he gasped, at last. "Tired!
Oh, let me alone; let me alone!" He tried to pull his hand away, but he seemed to have no more strength than a baby, and when he found that he couldn't release his hand he turned his face to the wall like a poor stricken creature that wishes to suffer in secret.

"You work too hard!" cried Mrs.
Poucher. "You'll kill yourself! Ah, John, you shouldn't work so hard!
You should let the others at the office do some of it! You mustn't do your own work and theirs, too!"

"They impose upon you, John!" continued Mrs. Poucher, still lamenting.
"You're too good-natured! Let them work! Let them see how they like it!
All those men, and you doing all the work! It isn't fair! Poor John!" she murmured. "Poor old John!"

And the back of his head took upon itself a certain satisfied appearance, and as his breathing grew less labored Mrs. Poucher ran to put his slippers on the stove to warm, and when she ran back John's face was no longer turned to the wall, but he was staring straight before him with the unseeing eyes of exhaustion. And I wish to say that Mrs. Poucher worked over him, and petted him, and made much of him, and lamented over him; yes, and took his shoes off and ministered unto him, and coaxed him to sit at the table, and fed him with tid-bits, and when at last he began to make a few remarks—speaking slowly and choosing his words with difficulty—the good woman almost wept with joy and became quite garrulous in her happiness.

"Oh, John," she said, "I've done such a lot to-day. There's always so much to do on the first day of spring house-cleaning, you know, and what's the matter, John? Oh, dear, is it coming on again?"

"It will pass over," sighed John. "Don't worry!"

"It's too bad you're so tired," said Mrs. Poucher, deep in meditation and not noticing him for a moment. "I was counting on getting the parlor carpet up to-night—John!"

She noticed him then, all right, and when she had got him back in his easy chair it was with difficulty that he restrained her from running for the doctor.

"No, no, no," he said.
"Never mind. I see that the people down the street. (His voice was very weak and he had to lean over him to catch his words) 'taking up' their carpets this morning."
"I wonder if we could get him," she eagerly cried.

"I'll see about it in the morning if I'm able," he sighed, and he closed his eyes as though the effort had been too much for him.
"John," she said, "will you have a little more to eat?"

"It would choke me!" he gasped.
"Oh, dear!" she cried. "And I made such a beautiful lemon pie this afternoon! Left all my house-cleaning and made it special!"

"I feel so hollow," said John, in a faint voice. "I never felt like this before."

"Will you have another slice of beef?" she asked.

John shook his head, but kept his eyes on her with a dumb pleading look that said: "Catch me further along these same lines, I beg."

"Another spoonful of potatoes?"
John shook his head, but continued to look.

"Another cup of coffee?"
"No," breathed John. "If you only had something..... a little sour
....."

She bustled into the pantry and John treated himself to a private smirk and made ready his mouth for pie. She bustled back, carefully carrying a spoon in her hand.

"Now hold your head back and open your mouth," she said.

"What? what?" began John, feebly, trying to keep her away with his knees.

"It's a spoonful of vinegar," she beamed. "Just the thing. Nice and sour. Come, now!"

"It's too sour," shuddered John.
"Shall I put a little water in it?"
"It isn't filling enough!"

He fell back, his eyes closed and his lips moved. Hastily drinking the vinegar herself, in order not to spill it, Mrs. Poucher leaned over him and caught these words, uttered almost unconsciously, and in that spiritual whisper with which the body sometimes tells the inward needs of the soul:
"Lemon pie..... O!..... Lemon pie....."

She had the pie before him before you could count three, and ten minutes later he lay back in his chair again and called her to him.

"Yes, John!" she cried, running forward. "Yes, John! Here I am!"

"I wish," he said, in the weak but querulous tones of an invalid, "I wish..... you'd bring me a napkin....."

Balloons Advance Guard

THAT IS BELIEF OF ARMY AND NAVY OFFICERS AT WASHINGTON.

TESTS TO BEGIN NEXT WEEK

The Advantage of Aeronautics in War Was Demonstrated for the First Time in the Japan-Russian Conflict.

Washington, July 20.—"In the next war that is fought the advance column will be made up of balloons and airships."

This is the belief freely expressed by army and navy officers here. For this particular reason the army balloons which are to begin at Fort Meyer next week will receive much attention in military circles. It is understood several of the military attaches of the diplomatic corps will be at Fort Meyer to take notes and report to their respective governments.

One of the most important results of the Fort Meyer tests probably will be the establishment of an aerostatic corps in the navy.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Newberry will be one of the interested spectators. He has been following closely the progress made in ballooning and has requested Gen. Allen of the signal corps to notify him when the tests will take place at Fort Meyer.

Constructing Balloon for Navy.

It is understood the airships and balloon corporation is building a dirigible balloon to be tried out before a naval board when completed. Another enthusiast in the navy is Rear Admiral C. M. Chester of the bureau of equipment.

Admiral Chester claims that aéro-nautics should be an adjunct of the navy because the marine is specially fitted to deal with the conditions that are met with in the air.

Lieut. Robert P. Henderson, chief engineer of the battleship Missouri, has made extensive experiments, having for their object the application of the gyroscopic to flying machines. He has the support of Admiral Chester and other naval officers in recommending the establishment of a corps in the navy to be devoted to the application of aeronautics to naval warfare.

Advantage Has Been Shown.

The advantage to be derived from such a corps, properly equipped, was clearly demonstrated in the Japan-Russian war, when balloons were, for the first time, employed in naval defense, although the idea had existed for some time.

At Vladivostok in the recent war, after a Russian destroyer and a cruiser had been destroyed by Japanese mines, Admiral Gessen ordered that a balloon detachment be formed to make observations around the harbor of Vladivostok. The results were so convincing that the Russian government, taking advantage of an offer of 1,000, 000 rubles made by Count Stroganov for that purpose, bought a fast passenger steamer in Germany and fitted it up as a floating depot for the balloon detachment.

This ship, the Rusa, is now a part of the Russian navy and is equipped with a modern hydrogen gas plant and all the other accessories of a first-class balloon station.

COL. W. H. ROSSINGTON DEAD.

Was Well Known in the West as a Railroad Attorney.

Topeka, Kas., July 20.—After a brief illness, Col. W. H. Rossington, an attorney well known throughout the West, died here Sunday of heart disease. Col. Rossington was instrumental in formulating plans for the reorganization of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, and the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, and the branch lines now owned by the Goulds in Kansas.

Col. Rossington was born in Galena, Ill. In 1874 he married Miss Mary Holliday, daughter of Cyrus K. Holliday, the builder of the Santa Fe. His wife died 20 years ago. There are three daughters, Mrs. Ross Phillips of Leavenworth, Mrs. W. W. Colpits of Kansas City, and Miss Alice Rossington of Topeka.

Woman's Body Found.

Columbus, Ind., July 20.—The body of Mrs. Carrie H. Percifield was found in a pool of blood west of the city Sunday night. John Underwood, a street car motorman, was placed under arrest by the authorities, who assert they have evidence connecting him with the woman's death. The woman was recently divorced from her husband.

William H. Rossington Dead.

Topeka, Kas., July 20.—William H.
Rossington, for several decades one of the most prominent members of the Kansas bar and a powerful force in politics, died suddenly of heart failure at his home here. For several years Rossington was a newspaper reporter in Philadelphia, St. Louis and Topeka.

Business Block Burns.

Fort Williams, Ont., July 21.—Fire Monday afternoon completely destroyed the new business block of the John King Co., the warehouse of the company, the Salvation Army headquarters and the stores of Kirkup & Wilkie, and R. Strachan, causing a loss of $200,000.

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold—your lungs are being poisoned. Don't let it go. It's a staggering poison. It's a danger to your life.
Finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or expectorants containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now a just law is on the books. "Put it on the label." If you are in your Cough Mixture, "Good!
Very good!" It's a warning for all cough mixtures, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's label—and none in the medicine, also it must be law by the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks! Don't you can always be on the safe side by demanding
